

“WHO’S DOING WHAT?”

Warren Davis (Gulf) has been a member for many years and celebrated the century mark late last year. Below is a note received from his daughter, Jan Partin

“If you cannot imagine what it was like to be here 100 years ago, ask Warren Davis. He was born December 16, 1920 in Muskogee, Oklahoma to Percy and Cora Davis.

He has accomplished much during his 100 years. He retired from Gulf Oil Corporation in 1983 as Chief Economist in the Department of Corporate Planning. He and his wife Jane moved to the Outer Banks shortly after that. They built their dream home and soon became stalwart members of the community.

Over the years, Warren has served on the Southern Shores Civic Association in a number of capacities; volunteering for the US Fish and Wildlife Service from 1983-2020, and serving as treasurer of Outer Banks Hotline from 1992-2016. In addition, he is active in his church, Outer Banks Presbyterian, and has served as an elder on the Board of Trustees and as Sunday School Superintendent, tutored students in math and English, and served on the Outer Banks Forum as Director and Treasurer.

He has forayed into such activities as hang gliding, scuba diving, tennis, golf, sailing, square dancing, and loves to do crossword puzzles, watch NFL football, and watch his favorite reruns on TV.

Warren married Susan Lawrence in 1998 9 years after Jane died. After Susan died, he became close friends with Peggy Foster. He is the father of 4 children, 9 grandchildren, and 11 great grandchildren, not to mention the many dogs he has had over the years. The present love of his life is his rescue dog Ness. Warren’s strengths are his calm self-confidence, his wit and sense of humor, and his moral convictions. He values honesty and integrity and is open to others’ opinions. His faith is an important part of his life. His needs have always been simple. He does not need a fancy house, or big boats, or expensive cars to make him happy. He would rather focus on doing something to making the world a better place and caring for those he loves best. He is well respected among family and friends alike.”

Dennis Flaherty, Chevron writes: Splitting time between central Oregon and Tucson, AZ. Staying active through riding our horses on public land, helping the USFS maintain trails in the wilderness, riding the Tucson “Loop” bicycle trail system and keeping up two houses. We enjoy watching our grandkids grow up and our son with his professorship in Chemical Engineering doing research and teaching the next generation of engineers.

John Franz, Texaco writes: Still playing golf twice a week. Have a group of about 25 people – including several retired former Texaco employees. Turned 93 on November 15

Leslie Gethard, Texaco writes: In fair health even though I will be 86. I walk 1-1/2 miles every day.

W Gordon Graves, Getty writes: Too much to do and not enough time to do it. Over the past years have been involved in local community outreach, wife and I became Life Masters bridge players, climbed our first “14er” in Colorado, touched feet on every continent and all 50 states and visited 55 countries and 11 other places not recognized by the U.N.

Vernon E Hobusch, Texaco writes: Doin’ yard work – getting ready for winters sleep! No COVID! Hope for the best for everyone.

Gil Hornung, Chevron writes: We are still hanging in and all OK!

Carmen Kunyczka, Texaco writes: Texaco Hello! Busy working in our library and gift shop, plus caring for my many plants – indoors and out.

Keith Kostlan, Texaco (new member): Since retiring from El Dorado Plant, I worked 7 years for Navajo Refining (Holly) in Artesia, NM. We moved to Charlotte, NC in September to be active grandparents to our three grandchildren.

Vergil McDaniel, Texaco writes: I got my flu shot and have voted. Staying home to keep away from the COVID.

Ouita G Ott, Chevron Surviving Spouse writes: Hello to all my Rangely friends and neighbors. There are less and less of us. I’m safe and well! God is Good!

Leona T Smith, Chevron writes: I'm proud of Chevron for contributing generously to the CAL fire – also the Big Sur Land Trust. Though recently I experienced two mandatory evacuations, I'm thankful to have my home spared. It would be interesting to hear of Jackie Horton and Ethel Delcourt and Danni Gilley who were part of H.R. with early mergers.
